Edtech Startup Business Model: Top 7 Revenue Streams

BUSINESS MODEL	PRODUCT TYPES	BENEFITS	DOWNSIDERS
Freemium subscription	- Test preparation - Professional/skill development - Online certification	- Quick user acquisition - Recurring revenue	- Most free users will never convert - Large support and user acquisition costs
Free trial subscription	- Test preparation - Professional/skill development - Online certification - Language learning	- Quick user acquisition - Recurring revenue - More paying users compared to freemium - No need to cut features from the free offering	- Possible to repeatedly create free accounts - Hard to convert people who are used to free content - Needs to demonstrate the product's full value before the trial runs out
Edtech marketplace	- Professional/skill development - Online certification	No need to spend resources on content creation	Users aren't always ready to pay for the creators' content
Ad-based revenue	- Language-learning - Mobile apps	- Easy to implement - Great for mobile apps	- Annoys users if implemented poorly - Ad-blockers on the web
Institutional/B2B sales	- K12 sector - STEAM kit - Performance assessment - ERP solutions	- Big deals - Post-sales revenue - Added value from partnerships	- Higher dependency on education institutions - Red tape and technology resistance
Grants/Sponsorships/Recruiting models	- MOOC platforms - Online certification - K12 and humanitarian apps	- Great as additional revenue streams - Valuable partnerships	- Hard to incentivize sponsors - Often insufficient as a sole business model
